Conference Hegel-Marx: “dead dogs” still live

9-10 April 2019

School of Arts and Humanities, University of Lisbon

Keynote Speakers: Klaus Vieweg (Friedrich-Schiller-Universität Jena); Tony Smith (Iowa State University).

The conference Hegel-Marx: “dead dogs” still live will take place between two important dates: the celebration of Karl Marx’s 200th birthday (1818-2018) and Georg W. F. Hegel’s 250th birthday (1770-2020). The purpose of the event is to create a forum for debating the work of these two authors and their complex relationship. Accordingly, the discussion will focus on Hegel’s and Marx’s texts, but also on the contributions of various interpreters and critics, in order to bring out the importance and the topicality of a central debate in the history of modern and contemporary thought.

We invite contributions related (but not limited) to the following topics and fields of study:

- Alienation, Dialectics, Emancipation, State, Idealism, Materialism, Negativity, etc.
- Economy, Aesthetics, Philosophy, Literature, Politics, Religion, etc.

Submission guidelines:

- Abstracts must have 300 to 350 words, be written in Portuguese, English or Spanish, and include 3 to 5 keywords (papers can have more than one author; each author can only submit one paper);
- Proposals must be sent by e-mail to hegel.marx.2019@gmail.com, with the subject “Submissão – Colóquio Hegel-Marx”. The body of the e-mail must include the name and affiliation of the author(s), along with a brief biographical note. The abstract must be sent as an attachment, in a format compatible with Word (preferably .docx) and cannot contain any reference to the author(s).
- All abstracts will be sent to the scientific commission and subjected to blind review.

Submission deadline: October 31st 2018 (11h59m p.m., Portuguese time).

Date of acceptance: no longer than January 2019.

The participants will afterwards be invited to submit a final version of their papers for publication, after the approval of the scientific committee, in Philosophica, a scientific journal edited by the University of Lisbon. The publication is optional.
